Whether you're seeking solace, enrichment or adventure, we've got a place for you!

Wesselman Nature Society is a 501c(3) not-for-profit, environmental organization that was founded in 1973.

Wesselman Nature Society provides environmental outdoor education opportunities designed to awaken the senses and enrich the lives of area residents and visitors.

To do this, the Society is responsible for the management and daily operations of Wesselman Woods Nature Preserve, as well as our west side property the Howell Wetlands, and our newest venture, Canoe Evansville.

Wesselman Woods Nature Preserve

No other city in the United States with a population exceeding 100,000 has within its corporate limits a timber stand of such acreage and sylvan qualities.

Wesselman Woods provides 200 acres of crucial habitat for a wide variety of animal species.

Howell Wetlands

This 35-acre urban wetland showcases a diversity of wetland habitat including a marsh, a cypress slough, an oxbow channel, as well as the surrounding prairie and bottomland hardwood forest.

Canoe Evansville

This environmental education program provides eco-tours on several local waterways. Expanding the knowledge and working to preserve, protect and promote the support of wildlife corridors, riparian habitats and green-space expansion along Pigeon Creek.
